

BreakingPoint Custom Application Toolkit

Accelerate proprietary application traffic to harden cyber infrastructure

No two networks are alike, and many are hit with more than thirty applications at the same time. Although most of those are traditional and popular applications, the networks will also be handling traffic from proprietary or unique applications.

The frequent emergence of new applications and the presence of proprietary applications can expose hidden vulnerabilities within an organization's cyber infrastructure. Identifying those vulnerabilities requires measuring the direct impact of all types of applications and filling the "realism gap," which grows each day (see diagram below).

Service providers, enterprises and government organizations need the flexibility to measure the resiliency of IT elements when faced with popular applications, new applications and proprietary applications.

The BreakingPoint Storm CTM™ can emulate more than 130 applications out of the box and through purchase of the BreakingPoint Custom Application Toolkit users gain the ability to emulate any proprietary and custom applications needed for realistic measurement of the resiliency of a cyber infrastructure.
