

BreakingPoint Custom Strike Toolkit

Validate the resiliency of IT elements and systems to detect and block any vulnerability

According to the National Institute of Standards and Technology's National Vulnerability Database, more than 38,000 security vulnerabilities are known to exist. Not only is that number growing, but thousands of additional vulnerabilities are being discovered and written each day.

The frequent emergence of new security attacks and equipment vulnerabilities can expose hidden weaknesses within an organization's cyber infrastructure. Identifying those vulnerabilities requires measuring the direct impact of all types of attacks and filling the "realism gap," which grows each day (see diagram below).

Service providers, enterprises and government organizations need the flexibility to measure the resiliency of IT elements when faced with the most current security attacks and evasion techniques.

The BreakingPoint Storm CTM™ can emulate more than 4,500 security strikes out of the box and through purchase of the BreakingPoint Custom Strike Toolkit users gain the ability to emulate any security strike needed for realistic measurement of the resiliency of a cyber infrastructure.
